DEDICATION

The high school years of the class of 1944 saw the United States change from a country at peace to a powerful nation at war. The conflict in which we have become embroiled has altered our lives at Columbia. We have undertaken new studies to prepare ourselves to aid in the battle for victory; we have devoted our free moments to making direct contributions, in such ways as possible, to the war effort; we have had to change our future plans and to delay the pursuit of our careers until we shall have secured a peace once more.

Looking forward, we find that we have a new future to face, a new future for ourselves and for the world, a future that we must plan and work for. Many of our classmates are now fighting to preserve those ideals upon which the world of tomorrow must be based, and it will not be long before we, too, shall have joined the struggle. When the war is won, it will rest with us, the students of today, to help make the post war world worthy of those who died for its sake. We will build it upon democratic ideals, and we will strive to make it a place in which our futures will be secure and in which we shall be proud to have our children live.

It seems appropriate, therefore, that we, the class of 1944, dedicate our Mirror to the concept that means so much to us—

A LASTING WORLD PEACE

FREDERIC J. CREHAN
Acting Principal

A Message From Mr. Crehan . . .

Our aims in this war have been stated in many ways by many persons. The statements vary in character from the concise Atlantic Charter to detailed descriptions of a post-war world organization. Expressed or implied in all of them, however, the thought persists that there must not be another war, that there must be devised a practical plan for a lasting world peace.

There have been many attempts during the centuries to eliminate the crime of war, or to diminish its frequency. They have ranged from the Pax Romana to the League of Nations. All such attempts have so far failed.

Moreover, our American plan of political isolation has not kept even us at peace. We have seen in 1917 and again in 1941 that we are inextricably bound up in the affairs of the world, that we cannot remain at peace while the rest of the world is at war. We should know now that peace as well as war is indivisible.

Despite the failure of our past national policy to keep us at peace, and of all attempts to organize the world for permanent peace, the search must go on. The end of this war will give us another chance, perhaps our last, to build a peaceful world.

What responsibility will you, the members of the class of 1944, have for the solution of this problem?

You have the obligation to inform yourselves about the problems of world peace, to study the plans that have been made in the past, and to learn why they failed. You must understand the factors—economic, technological, social, racial, political, psychological—which operate to place practical limitations on international action. You must develop a sympathetic and receptive understanding of other peoples. You must discover what the United States can do to help build a just and lasting peace. For "blood and tears shall be the inheritance of that people who neglect to learn and to teach . . . that it is necessary for men to live at peace if they want to live at all."

ADMINISTRATION

Mr. John H. Bosshart, for 17 years superintendent of schools, has been signally honored in his appointment to the office of New Jersey State Commissioner of Education. Mr. Curtis H. Threlkeld, Principal of Columbia High School since 1927, has been equally honored in his appointment to the post of Superintendent of Schools. Mr. Frederic J. Crehan, Vice-principal of Columbia for 17 years, has been made Acting Principal; and Mr. Harry B. Sheeley, formerly history teacher and class guide, has been made Acting Vice-principal and Dean of Boys, to serve along with Miss Mary Henderson, Vice-principal and Dean of Girls.

The editors of the Mirror feel that they speak for the entire student body in expressing best wishes to our new administrators, in full knowledge that they, as able educators, will carry on Columbia's high standards.

WELCOME HOME 1944

Class History

A high school like Columbia, whose very name breathes its inherent belief in democracy, whose traditions and laws are essentially American, whose advantages point the way to the future in a finer, truer world; an American school around which center the happy experiences which will always remain bright spots in our memories—such a school is perhaps a small but tangible reason for our whole-hearted support of the democratic cause in this war.

It is difficult, somehow, to look back to a time when eighteen-year-old boys still wore tweed jackets and saddle shoes. Our brothers before us gladly laid aside their tweed jackets for those of khaki. Now the challenge is to us. We, the graduating class of 1944, must give of our best in defense of our high principles, for we are America's citizens of tomorrow.

We look back, some of us with nostalgia, some with regret for wasted opportunity, some with a feeling of accomplishment, upon our three years at Columbia. And these are the things we remember.

We were sophomores when the United States entered the war. Since then, the members of our class have been witnesses and active participants in a great many innovations brought about in a necessary effort to adapt us to a war-time world. There were, of course, changes in curriculum; new subjects were introduced preparatory to our active participation in the war. Special emphasis was placed upon mathematics and the sciences, as preparation for our imminent induction into the armed services.

Health is vital to youth at any time, but particularly during a war. The physical education department has now more than ever become an important part of Columbia's schedule. The class of '44 was one of the first to receive the benefits of a physical education program consisting of five classes a week.

During our three years at Columbia, a new organization has come into being—the Victory Corps. Its six divisions—General, Community Service, Production, Land, Sea, and Air—were organized as a preparation for military service and as an aid to the war effort. Through the General Division of the Victory Corps was launched the memorable bond drive of 1942, which raised $115,000.

In recent years, one of our most vivid recollections of high school days will be Columbia's football games. Who can ever forget those thrilling Saturday afternoons at Underhill Field, or who can forget our traditional Thanksgiving games with West Orange? This year, it is true, our victories were few. The stars of last year's team had been graduated or had entered the armed services, leaving Columbia a new, untrained team. Although we lost the majority of this year's games, the team improved remarkably as the season progressed, and always displayed a brilliant spirit.

We think we were a class of fine histrionic ability. Future Columbia students will remember us particularly for our unusual Junior Night, a musical extravaganza with a war-time theme. The scene of "Time and a Half" was laid in a defense plant. The characters ranged from factory workers to Hollywood glamour girls, and the show featured a number of clever and original dances. Most of the class took part in Junior Night.

In 1943, after much deliberation, the senior class decided upon "The Barretts" as its class play. Primarily the story of the love affair between Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning, the action occurred in a Victorian setting. "The Barretts" was played by an exceptionally fine cast and will long be remembered.

Columbia lost, this year, an old friend and adviser, Mr. Curtis H. Threlkeld, who has been our principal for sixteen years. Because of his promotion to Superintendent of Schools, Mr. Threlkeld has had to leave Columbia, but we shall never forget him. Acting in his place is Mr. Frederic J. Crehan, previous vice-principal.

These are some of the things we remember. But there are other things, bigger things, which will always remain with us. We have made lifelong friends at Columbia.

something to strive for.

Item XXIV: I, Brad Spander, leave my title of "Local Casanova" to Claude Offray, the Blond Bombshell.

Item XXV: I, Dick Clancy, leave my tricky little knife, the cause of many a feminine shriek, to any junior boy who thinks he's funny.

Item XXVI: We, Jay Wiess and Bob Heydt, leave to the casts of Junior Nights to come, a sterling example of the brand of humour that has made us what we are—which is an opening we would rather die than pass up, were this not a legal document.

Item XXVII: I, Ted McDonough, leave to Kenny Kyle, the knack of making a car battery run when completely dead, while holding the roof on with one hand and the door with the other.

Item XXVIII: I, Even Baker, leave my engaging shyness and laconic manner of speech to—well, there must be someone who can qualify.

Item XXIX: I, Helen Goduey, leave to the Secretary-elect, my knowledge of how to condense lengthy speeches into one sentence, and avoid a lousy case of writer's cramp.

Item XXX: I, Betty Jane Fountain, leave to

Ellen Kiernan, the enviable position of the girl everyone likes—even girls!

Item XXXI: I, Peg Weismiller, leave my unceasing and time-consuming activities in school to Pat Allen.

Item XXXII: I, Jane Dent, bequeath my studied solemnity and languid poise to Bette Brady.

Item XXXIII: I, Regina Wyglendowski, leave to Leone Behrendt, my scintillating conversation, an important part of any girl's popularity.

Item XXXIV: I, Fred Neese, leave Bob McLaughlin out of breath from being chased.

Item XXXV: I, Grace Smethurst, leave my original (to say the least) manner of turning corners (in a car) to all potential drivers—with the assurance that, no matter how awkward, it gets you there (a good part of the time).

Item XXXVI: I, Jack Hillman, leave to Jim ("Hymie") Carr, my growing interest in the Spanish language, and my thirst for further knowledge.

Item XXXVII: I, Sandy Meade, leave to Remmy Lane, my varied repertoire of parlor tricks, guaranteed to keep a dull party limping along until relief comes.

Item XXXVIII: I, Edna Okner, leave to Helen

FOURTH YEAR

Class Will

Hawkins, my ability to "get around." I also bequeath to her anything else we may have in common.

Item XXXIX: I, Joan Schueler, leave to future classes of girls, my very interesting collection of snapshots acquired through the years.

Item XI: I, Dick Slocum, leave to any budding mathematician, the slightly dazed look which follows naturally upon the heels of a bout with the slide rule, with a second course consisting of log books and unit circles.

Item XLI: We, the senior members of the football team, leave to Irv Hood, the prophecy that next year he will come through the season intact.

Item XLII: I, Suzanne Pyle, leave to Audrey Peters, the knowledge that we are two good reasons why "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes."

Item XLIII: I, Mary Lea Shiman, leave a record of flawless class recitations, delivered in the face of unwarranted interruptions and distractions on the part of my classmates.

Item XLIV: I, Skippy Kemp, leave my ability to throw a really lively party to Don Neider, who, of course, is a veteran at the game himself.

THE HIRRON

Item XLV: I, Chuck Baldwin, leave to young dance-goers, the memory of a new high in floor-show entertainment.

Item XLVI: I, Clint Packard, leave to Dave Dorand, my prowess in the chlorinated tank. (My remarkable resemblance to the Swoon-Crooner is something too precious for me to trust in careless hands.)

Item XLVII: I, Carol Kasen, leave to young and hopeful thespians, a shining example of the power of a silvery voice and perfect diction.

Having thus distributed our treasures and possessions individually, we, as a class, do bequeath the following:

To Mr. Sterling: a history class that can find a flaw in his argument and prove it.

To the Lunchroom Committee: girls who like to eat sitting down— not standing in the aisle.

To the pupils in general: a sophomore class that will not insist upon flocking like sheep to stairway I between every class for the first two months.

To the faculty in general: a sophomore class that will learn the first day that 222B is not next door to 404.

FORUMBL HIGH SCHOOL

THE HORROR

To the typing teachers: students who have not been hanging away on their own machines for years in their own original way.

To the students in general: a sure-fire exercise to get rid of slight list to starboard which invariably evidences itself once the load of books is removed from the hip.

To those unsure of foot: a step in the girls' lunchroom which doesn't jump up and snap at you when you're flying low with a tray-load of dishes.

To the overcredulous sophomores: the warning never to ask directions of anyone whose nose is not buried in "Columbian Highlights."

To the mechanical drawing classes: ink which doesn't smear itself all over the drawing when you're away from your desk.

To the House and Grounds Committee: search warrants.

To Miss Silvernail: library chairs which don't screech like banshees every time a restless reader launches on a round-trip of the room; also, students who don't "oh," "ah," and "oh-oh" every time the library telephone rings.

To the medical staff: some new and logical symptoms.

To the school: a balcony which does not give you the impression that you're about to pitch headlong over the railing when you descend the stairs.

To the Assembly Committee: a student audience which does not clap and cheer frantically, like beings possessed, in order to shorten the working (?) day. (Or perhaps the A. C. will look this gift horse in the mouth.)

To those having late (oh, very!) lunch: a five-minute intermission between periods three and four in which to gulp down that part of your lunch which is gulped down anyway, but which is often a hindrance to class recitation.

To English teachers: short-story aspirants who have normal, healthy minds, instead of the murky-swamp, cold, grey-fog variety which unfailingly crops up every year.

To Miss Baiardi: a Spanish (imagine!) class with sober-minded, serious students.

To the School Council: homeroom representatives who, if they must come to meetings late, will not trip and drape themselves dramatically and noisily over at least three chairs in the back row.

Class Will

To the pupils in general: sweet, even-tempered classmates who can pass the 3:21 locker-rush test unruffled and at peace with the world.

To the faculty in general: classes who will think of some reasons other than (1) Monday-morning, (2) hunger, (3) satiation, (4) heat, (5) cold, and (6) Friday-afternoon, for not being able to "settle down and get some work done."

So, having performed our duty to our teachers, our fellow-students (we feel we can call them that now, becoming very benevolent in our senility), and our school itself, we, with a clear conscience (didn't you know?), and a stealthy backward look at, not only Columbia, but all our years as irresponsible, carefree "kids" (hated word), are now prepared to step into the world which had long told us that these past three years would be the happiest we shall ever know. In spite of its present turmoil, then, it must be a wise world, for though we have "griped" steadily in healthy American fashion, none of us will deny that we've learned, we've grown, but best of all, we've been happy.

THE HERON

Greetings to Class of 1941

Your Class Will provides for many bequests of value and charges those who follow you with the preserving and protecting of the traditions of Columbia High School. By so giving, you continue the never-ending pattern of high school boys and girls and June graduation. You have pretended that all is the same as it has been in the past, but the pattern has changed from peace times, though you would be most reluctant to admit it.

If I might, then, be allowed to add a codicil to your Will, this would be my wish.

"I give and bequeath to each one of you a great courage to face the troubled times ahead, the ability to accept fully your share of the world's problems, and the vision to help make a wise peace."

This bequest is the greatest gift Columbia can give to you.

Sincerely,

MARY S. HENDERSON.

WELCOME HIGH SCHOOL

Senior Play

"Rebellious, undutiful daughter . . ."
Will somebody please get that dog off the piano
"Who knows but the world may end tonight . . ."
Quick, find Jack Stewart; he goes on in three lines
"Waste of good vittles"
Robinson, let's try that love scene again
"Oh, you'll be thinkin' me vulgar, sir . . ."
Mr. Cohron, do we have to come on Saturday morning . . .
Gad, what vigor
Elinor, make that wink more conspicuous
"Oh, liked it tremendously, but . . ."
Robinson, let's try that love scene again—
"But I thought a play was an dialogue . . ."
Oh, Mr. Cohron, I can't make Flush be still
"You consummate fool, leave the room—"
Robinson, let's try that love scene again
"Perseverance . . ."
—and so on far into the night!

Ah, methinks I detect the faint aroma of a Senior Play nearby. To quote the great lord (Miss Marjorie Carleton in this case), it had a certain strength, but also—er—a certain stench! Oh, but we were only fooling! Because "The Barretts" was one of the very brightest highlights in the amazing career of that outstanding class of 1944. Yes, the production will go down brilliantly in the annals of Columbia's history, for not only did Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning step right smack out of our English Lit. books onto our stage, but they were even more glorified by our splendid interpretations of said poet and spouse—even if we do say so ourselves, as who shouldn't!

Of course the going got a bit rough at times. For instance, the afternoon when Elizabeth's ruffled petticoats remained at down-stage right while Elizabeth herself was swooning merrily away at upstage center! "But we didn't let that stop us" no, we even reached the point where we could enumerate (with no extra charge) the features of our composite Senior Play character: "Your complexion is muddy, most unpleasant . . ."
"Very beautiful slim shoulders . . ."
"Probably the hip—the lower limbs deformed . . ."
"Don't tell me you can bear to part with one hair of those beautiful whiskers?"
"I believe you've put on weight . . ."
"It's so difficult to know where one's feet are; Papa—"

IMPRESSIONS ON THE THESPIAN ART

By Flush

Little did I know when I was a foolish pup, leading my trivial, inconsequential existence, completely ignoring the higher, more cultural aspects of life, that the day would dawn when I, too, would be attracted by the irresistible call of the theater. Poetry, also, was beyond my petty realm of comprehension, for I had never tasted the exquisite fruits of literary knowledge—with one exception. For, to me, Elizabeth Barrett was but a picture I had carelessly eaten for lunch from a book inadvertently dropped and neglected near my favorite haunt in the library.

One day, on overhearing a conversation concerning the need for a talented cannie to complete the cast of the Senior Play at Columbia High School, I realized that here, perhaps, was the answer to my meditations on the futility of life!

And it was.

Love.

FLUSH

—The melée sounds horrible—or are we boring you?

"The Barretts" were a remarkable, lovable family who immortalized the name of Wimpole Street and whose intricacies and entanglements constituted this year's Senior Play. Paternal dominance reigned supreme over the Barrett children until Elizabeth, the famed poetess, defied the will of her tyrannical father by eloping with the equally famed Robert Browning. Among the other family difficulties were the poor progression of the love affairs of another daughter, Henrietta, the object of whose affections was dashing Captain Surtees-Cook; and the usual complications of brothers and sisters, namely Octavius, Arabel and George. Further mishaps and glee were added by the presence of Mill Mitford, a flighty but well-known novelist of the day; Cousin John Denyon, a wealthy patron of the arts; Willy and Wilson, who were the 1840 counterparts of our present-day maid problem; and Flush, Elizabeth's faithful cannie companion—a most ably interpreted role!

"The Barrets" was a great show—and we behind the footlights enjoyed it almost more than those out front!

COLUMBIA HIGH SCHOOL

Class Prophecy

Time: 1959.

Place: Miss Ackerman's 6th period History Class.

Scene: Two harassed and over-worked pupils dash madly in, to the strains of Miss Silvernail's musical voice tinkling into the phone, "Library!" They rush frantically over to the shelves and proceed to disrupt the alleged peace, and quiet of the sacred archives of Columbia High School's famed library. In one corner we see Mary Leo Shiman still struggling valiantly over her fifth year of French IV; otherwise the proverbial "old order hath changeth, giving place to new." Students in plastic clothes have taken the place of our old friends in tweeds and sweaters. Yes, there is a distinctly ultra-modern air about good old Columbia High School. Now they've got

Root Beer in the drinking fountains. (But, don't worry, it's only some old carbon dioxide they had lying around!)

So our two little friends run over and stand on each other's shoulders and soon they have heroically lifted Who's Who down from its dusty repose on the dusty shelves. (No offense, Mr. Walbrecher!) They manage to place the revered volume on the nearby table, and with a flick of one of their ponkies they flip that nasty big old Webster's Dictionary to the other side of the desk, dramatically hold their breaths, and carefully open the book. Who knows what hidden depths of knowledge they will uncover?

"Hm, hmm, hmm," say they as they thumb through these brilliant pages of history. "Humm, hm."

"Say, look, here's an interesting name, Betty Jane Fountain. It says she became editor-in-chief of 'Madame'—the magazine of fashion. (Yes, my dear, positively!) A sort of shining 'Lady in the Dark.' And, oh, look who's on her staff! There's Marilyn Dettmar—the current Mrs. Tommy Manville—and Barbara Ann Rhodenwald, delighting the fashion world with her quaint column, 'Accent on Living." And included in the dazzling entourage of models and mannequins, we see the name of Franki Schwarz, the sultry dark-haired siren. Regina Wyglendowski, posing in her famous Hula Dance costume in which she has won such fame and recognition; and there's Jean Dorian's photo, winning her 79th beauty contest at Lake Mohawk. Here, too, we find Miss Jane Jessup, photographed still ardently cheering for Princeton's football team—a charming picture indeed.

"Oh, here's Bob Sebeck and George Schreith, editing Esquire. You remember the duel they fought over the title of best-dressed gentleman since Lucius Beebe. And speaking of Esquire, there's Duff Brown, the immutable comic, heading their staff of zany cartoonists and humorists which also includes Ronny Miller, Mort Kaish, John Banta. Among the magazine's columnists we see names such as Bill Weygand and Sid Frank, among!

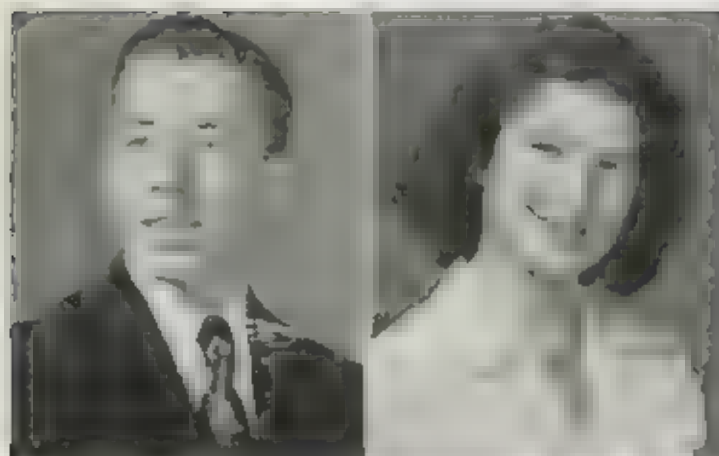

"Hey, look! Here's an article about that illustrious Dance Theatre founded by Janice Bodenhoof and Rowena Colley, both of whom are now starring on Broadway in that wonderful new musical comedy, 'Arizona!' (Reserved seats selling three years in advance!) The costumes were designed by Sally Krueger, it says here; and the sets were originated by Louise Swensk! Oh, and here's Ellie Josephson's name with Alan Robinson, reviving 'Macbeth,' and produced by David Forman and Company. Hm!

"Clancy, Dick Clancy—oh, he's taken over Sherman Billingsley's Stork Club. See, how it tells about their entertainers—John Dudley Woodruff, the satirist, accompanied by Ted McDonough and Arty Kaplow—need we say more? Doris Hughes sings there. And look who's the Master of Ceremonies—George Skiff, of all people.

"Wait a minute! I see Don Lasser's name. He writes that new radio show, Our Guy Saturday! He's sponsored by Pickle Packard's Peachy Pontiac Company. Say, that's a great show. My grandmother listens to it and says that every time she hears Bill Flanagan, the singer, she swoons from the memory of that old decrepit antiquated crooner Frank Sinatra! (Yes, my dear, positively!) That's the show that sponsors Jack Hillman's band, too! Yes, and here it says: 'Impersonations by Lois Quick, accompanied by Mush Parkin's invigorating violin. Some 'um.' "Oh, here's Carolyn Blocker. She wrote that new book with Betty Firth called Impressions in a Beauty Parlor. She was inspired by that scintillating salon run by Edna Okner and Audrey Harris—you know, the one where they have Terry Thompson musically entertaining with her low bass voice and her cello (we're only kidding Terry), with comic interludes by John Dakis. They've got Marilyn Cupp and Barbara Grove and Jean MacDonald madly throwing mud-packs at Irene Thompson. (Yes, my dear, positively!) extravaganza for it, too. Oh, and here it says that Jean Bohlen writes an Advice to the Lovelorn column—imagine that! Oh, and here's Chuck Baldwin who's featured in all the newspapers now. He flew to Mars on a daredevil rocket-ship journey with Sammy Vitt and Tom Smith, and they found Thos. Williams, of all people, waiting there for them! Someone else who's quite prominent in print now is Skippy Kemp. He poses for the Arrow Shirt ads, with Gayle White fondly tying his tie. All pictures snapped by the famous photography firm of Al Sachs, Bob Strauss, Dave Lewit and Dot Segal! Oh, look, here's an article about the Times sports section. . . Caesar Kimmel has been writing some very interesting articles about personalities in the realm of athletics. There's one about Rich Cherry, the new football coach at Pottawattamie College, and another about Dick Korngut, the president of the Gym Teachers' Society of Lower Basin Street, and about Frank Baldwin and Sandy Meade, the basketball stars, and Norman Merz and David Brown, the current aqua-beaux. Ginny Drake (yes, with Bob Duer's help) is syndicating a column on women in sports she's written about Diane Arras's miraculous swim up over Niagara Falls in a barrel (and a bathing suit). Diane also manages a theatrical agency in her spare time. And about Jane Kull's pitching for the New York Yankees with Catherine Neimitz playing catcher! (And may we add they had a very successful season.) And here's a column on Jane Gerssele, the sensational tight-rope walker, with her long flowing black hair cut short enough so she won't trip over it!

"The well-known Betty Guffinger and Patty Gilbertson (the beautiful president of the Aquarium, who admires all things nautical and is connected with the Navy), it says, are holding New York audiences enthralled with their amazing juggling act, and Carol Kasen, the successful snake charmer (with an eye out for our Foreign Policy), is entertaining at the Circus. (Snakes for the above act are supplied by Jack Steigerwald, the famous elephant trainer.) Jack Kruse leads the circus band, Bob Mende is the ring-master, and Pat Day is reported to have a peanut vending concession at the back entrance! Here it says that Dot Harrison, the well-known barker (yes, my dear, positively!), is enticing people in to see Rose Perry, the Fat Lady, play her remarkable bugle solo, and to see

THE MIRROR

Bob Ward, the Thin Man and Electrical Genius (it says here). Joan Bottell is said to have a double trapeze act with Eddie Ortzen, and Cheryl Cassidy, the comedienne, is an added attraction.

"Oh, and here's an article about Margot Trimble (former President of Vassar) and Erna Schneider (former President of Wellesley), who for the sake of humanity, together with Betty Monk and Pat Goldin, have founded a girls' boarding school in the interior of Tibet; and it tells here how Bud Wolfert and Claire Van Orden are talent scouts looking for prospective students in the heart of the Belgian Congo. And here's something about Joan Conkling, the feminine F. P. Adams, stumping the Board of Experts on Information Please, (Board consisting of Mary Carlaw, expert in field of science, and John Sodoma, expert in field of sports—a very enlightened combination, to say the least!) And here's Barbara Saunier, the Ilka Chase of her day, interviewing Art Gerweck and Tom Martin, men-about-town. (I mean re-ally). And there are Marybelle Littell and Jean Strelow and Barbara Raymond—they were especially noted for their newest chemical concoction designed to take the kink out of Jerry Schultz's hair. Class Prophecy Janet Kempf). Frank Muller, it says, was the kind of a fire chief that drank so much of his Firemen's Own Cough Syrup, that he nearly set himself aflame! Oh, and here's something about Pinky Williams, managing an ANZAC RCAF canteen for visiting Australians and Canadians who liked her hospitality so much they decided to stay for good! She's very ably assisted by two genial hostesses, Cis Wilson and Pat Malone (who puts in a good word for Federal Union every now and then). And, hey, wait! Here's Bob Schmidt and Sonny Saenger doing advance publicity work for Charles Atlas, with Tommy Eustis along in case anything goes wrong, as well as Howard Ford, who likes a little excitement every once in a while, too!

And look! Here are their class officers—there's Helen Gedney, managing a huge occupational therapy hospital for broken-down G. A. A. members; and there's Peggy Weismiller, the President's wife, who's travelling around creating so much good will that she's almost outdoing Mrs. Roosevelt (who did a lot of travelling in 12 years, at this printing, too!). And last but not least, there's Jack Stewart, who worked his way up from the ranks to be executive head of the Good Humor Company—and that's a record to be highly commended!"

And with a deep sigh, our little friends wearily close these remarkable annals of progress and achievement, and again using each other's shoulders for foot-stools, they return the dusty volume of Who's Who to its dusty repose on the still dusty shelves.

"Say, if you want a ride home after school," says one exhausted member of the class of 1959 to the other, "meet me out at my new helicopter in the parking space."

"Oh, thanks a lot, but I've got to go in to see Mr. Gnagey about my Mirror assignment. And say, you know I think that class of 1944 was certainly something to be proud of!"

COLUMBIA HIGH SCHOOL

Junior Night

There comes a time in every adolescent's life when he goes through the stage commonly known as Junior Night. Few members of the junior class remain unscathed; the disease is characterized by an intensely haggard look (particularly on those martyrs—the Pre-Junior Night Committee); an abundance of unfinished homework; a secretive glow in the eye when curious seniors and sophomores ask questions; and an inclination to answer,

"I had to attend Junior Night rehearsal yesterday," to all sorts of demands made by those who have no conception of what that means.

With bared teeth and fiery determination the class of '45 set about to produce an extravaganza to surpass all previous extravaganzas—and we must admit that the result was most gratifying.

Come Friday and Saturday nights, March nineteenth and twentieth, we were wafted away into the depths of India where we found ourselves right smack in the midst of fakirs, native dancers, rope stick experts, snake charmers, and what-have-you—not to mention those lovely American dough-boys who were suffering from severe homesickness, and especially for good old American girls. Grieving over the fact that their letters from home contained too much about income taxes and not enough of what they wanted, they were amazed and over-joyed at the miraculous news that the war was over! As soon as possible they were on their way back to dear old U. S. A., where numerous complications beset them from all sides. While in India, the boys had become involved with a certain very attractive princess; a certain very attractive and talented baseball pitcher known as "Cannonball," who bore a marked resemblance to the princess's lost love; and a certain very attractive and not so talented camel—all three of whom also found their way to the U. S. A., with devastating results. Talking camels, orientally-clad princesses, and boxed-up baseball pitchers proved most amazing to the girls back home and to their Aunt Agatha. These patriotic girls had been emersed in the business of running things (to put it mildly) while the soldiers were away. Every one lived happily ever after when affairs were ultimately straightened out against the romantic background of Horton's Supermarket.

Under the able direction of Miss Mary Clutton, a fine cast, a host of glamorous dancers, a rather bumpy camel, and the mysterious "Cannonball," this year's Junior Night, About Face, supplied another "unforgettable" of entertainment to Columbia's annals.

SHE STOOPS TO CONQUER

Had Oliver Goldsmith been resurrected from his illustrious eighteenth-century grave, we're sure he would have beamed with pride at Parnassian Society's February production of "She Stoops to Conquer." A revival of any classic drama always holds a particular challenge, especially when it is to be presented by a high-school group. But we found that "stooping to conquer" was a most delightful pastime, and, thus duly inspired, we set about to relive "The mistakes of a night" and most successfully, too!

Of course it was rather startling to run into ourselves in the dressing-room mirror, elaborately laden down with gleaming white wigs and weighty costumes of brocade and satin—all crowned with those very prosaic cardboard tags warning "DO NOT REMOVE." Yes, even Pipa Hardcastle found that it was quite difficult to "take that garrison without spilling a drop of blood" while his black silk stockings were swimming complacently about the gold buckles of his eighteenth-century shoes!

With a rather unusual cast consisting chiefly of sophomores (which is an innovation in itself in the very venerable Parnassian Society), Miss Memory, very capably assisted by Elmor Josephson, proceeded to instruct us in the efined arts of flirting, playing pranks, proposing, and various and sundry other little everyday trivoltics. Ah, for the life of an eighteenth-century duc!

In fact, being a barmaid for a night turned out to be rather a hilarious affair; and portraying a "charming coquette" was even more gratifying. Young Marlow, though a flattering, bashful gentlemen among modest, well-bred ladies, seemed quite at home and very easily enticed by the innocent wiles of Kate who was masquerading as a "poor relation of the family." Complications ensued with the intrigues and escapades of the notorious Tony Lumpkin, mother's-darling and prankster-supreme of the Hardcastle family. Then Papa's further distress was caused by the "modern modesty or old-fashioned impudence" of the two visiting suitors, Hastings and Marlow. Too, Squire Hardcastle was not only confronted with a servant problem (Diggory, et al., whose mental capacities were sadly lacking), but a flighty wife, and a pre-arranged betrothal between his daughter Kate and young Marlow, which all helped to upset the normal Hardcastle routine no end. Mrs. Hardcastle herself was deeply concerned with the match of her "dear sweet agreeable horrid son," Tony, and her captivating ward, Miss Constance Neville, who in turn shocked the family and floored her aunt by running off with Mr. Hastings.

So you can well see that old Columbia was rather a lively place on the night of February twelfth—what with barmaids, inebriates, doting parents, and frustrated lovers merrily cavorting about the stage. Though probably Mr. Goldsmith would scarcely have been recognized in the crowd, he certainly would have enjoyed himself—everyone else did!

ART SERVICE GROUP

The Art Service Group consists of a group of art students who are on hand at all times to help out in any of the organizations in Columbia whose activities require art work. These artists create advertising posters for club meetings, school dances, etc., as well as designing and painting scenery for school plays. The club also lends its talents to the war effort by making posters for bond drives and other government-sponsored campaigns. This year, in addition to these customary activities, the Art Service Group has been taking part in Junior Red Cross work by making menus to be put on Christmas trays for our sick sailors. The club does not meet regularly but functions whenever its services are needed. This work not only helps school organizations but also enables the students participating in it to get practical art-work practice even beyond what they receive in classroom instruction.

CAMERA CLUB

Despite wartime restrictions on camera supplies, the Camera Club has attempted to maintain its regular program of activities. Under the leadership of the chairman of the darkroom committee, Harry Augenblick, the main function of the club has been to increase the proficiency of its beginners. Among the other activities of the club are practical demonstrations and lectures, "Picture-of-the-Month" contests, and semi-annual exhibits. Persons skilled in specific branches of photography are often invited to lecture at the monthly meetings. The members of the club are always willing to offer any advice or criticism to a fellow camera enthusiast. Special meetings are also held whereby the club travels en masse to some predetermined destination where they take shots of certain assignments. These outings have been among the high points of the year's activities and have given the members a chance to compare their different interpretations of the same subject.

CAMOUFLAGE CLUB

The Camouflage Club, begun last year to assist anyone interested, discusses the art of camouflage at its monthly meetings, and its members learn how to apply their knowledge on models. The club also urges its members to try their own ideas and, if possible, add to what is already known about this comparatively new war science.

Camouflagers learn that there is no black magic about camouflage and by their own efforts discover that it is a combination of hard work, imagination, and common sense. On small models and sketches of troops, military works, or supplies, members learn to trick the observer by camouflage. Three fundamental practices are (1) to hide the object, by using material or artificial structure that blends with the background; (2) to blend background with pattern, texture, tone, and color in order to make it indistinguishable from landscape; (3) to deceive the eye with decoys and dummies that distract attention from vital points.

CHILD CARE CLUB

The Child Care Club is designed to meet the demands of girls for facts about the development and care of children. This knowledge is especially important now when so many mothers, busy with war work and unable to hire full-time adult help, need high school girls to take care of their children. Many members are responsible for the care of younger brothers and sisters or children in their neighborhood. Topics such as discipline, feeding, and how to amuse a child are announced in advance and are then discussed at the monthly meetings. Any member may ask club advice on a particular problem concerning child care; the club will discuss it and offer helpful suggestions. In order to get a more practical knowledge of the subject, several members have visited classes at Fielding School. Here they see application of theory and observe evidence in children of the facts learned at the meetings.

COMMERCIAL CLUB

Last spring the club turned its attention to the war effort and assisted in the local defense councils and ration boards. Other members obtained part-time jobs in industrial and commercial organizations. Club activities in school were cancelled until this January when a small group of enthusiasts started a new program of school activities. They visited the Latin-American Institute to learn more about Spanish-Shorthand, and planned their annual New York trip to include a visit to a South American importing and exporting company and a theatre party. The constitution is being revised, and it is hoped that the new plan will include a service group that will meet the need for secretarial help within the school. The Commercial Club in the past has always been a large and an active organization. Now that it is getting under way again, there is no reason why it should not prosper in the future.

GUILD

The English Club, several times dis-banded, was this year revived and re-organized under a name used several years ago—The Guild. Hard work on the part of a few interested students and the sponsor, got the organization off to a good start, and active membership during the year made the Guild a going concern which it hopes to remain. The club's aim is to satisfy and inform those of Columbia's students interested in literature and related subjects, such as art, music, and drama. The program committee, headed by Don Lasser, took charge of monthly meetings at which members read their own prose and poetry, wrote and produced skits, and discussed the literature of other countries. Particularly enjoyed was the Guild-Christmas party, which featured a medieval Christmas banquet. The Editorial Board handled the publication of pamphlets containing original writings submitted by club members.

FRENCH CLUB

The aims of the French Club are to familiarize its members with French culture, literature, music, and art, and to provide opportunities for greater experience in the use of the language than is usually possible in the classroom. The program committee tries to give as many members as possible a chance to assist in this effort. The French Club this year has produced several amusing plays in French. "L'Anglais et le Qu'on le Park" presented early in the year, was especially entertaining. The publication of a newspaper, "La Petite Ecole" has stimulated and furthered an interest in written French. Thus club members are gaining valuable experience in applying their knowledge of the language. The club realizes that it is especially important now to get a good basic foundation in foreign languages since the government is providing opportunities for intensive study in languages to prepare trained linguists for post-war positions.

FORUM ROMANUM

Activities

FORUM ROMANUM

The Forum Romanum has taken its inspiration and background material from the Roman classics, and through them tries to satisfy the interest of Latin students in the history and life of the ancient Roman empire. This year the Forum Romanum has contributed its effort to the war in sponsoring the collection of "junk jewelry" for the boys in service to use in bartering with the natives in the Pacific theatre of war, and has also sent warm clothing to the suffering peoples of Greece. Opportunity is given to all the members to contribute material and ideas for the monthly meetings and to take an active part in the meetings. An amusing Halloween party and a beautiful Christmas program were two of the highlights of the year. A great deal of the success of the club is attributed to its sponsors, who expend much time and work in making the organization worth while.

FIRST AID CLUB

Columbia has met the need for emergency medical care in case of air raids by the formation of the First Aid Club, composed of pupils who have been trained to give immediate help in case of casualties during a possible air raid. Members of the club learn and practice the fundamentals of First Aid under the guidance of the sponsor of the organization. Pupils who have not yet taken the Standard American Red Cross course are given instruction in it and have an opportunity to take the test; and when they have satisfactorily passed the test, they receive their certificates. During air raid drills in the school, First Aid squads, made up of members of the club, are stationed at special posts on each floor. These squads have the necessary equipment ready at these posts and are prepared to administer first aid when and if the need occurs.

M. A. N. CLUB

Among the many extra-curricular activities in Columbia, the Mathematics for the Army and Navy Club ranks as one of the most beneficial to all students, especially those who plan to enter some specialized branch of our armed forces. As the constitution of the M. A. N. Club states, "This club was organized to provide opportunity for students to gain information about and further their skills on various aspects of mathematics and to promote activities in all fields which contribute to the war effort." The club was organized and functioned last year, and this year an even more elaborate program has been worked out. It has been divided into three groups: the Map Reading Section, the Navigation Section, and the Section on the use of Instruments. A pupil having taken secondary mathematics may optionally join any one of these sections. Not only are there the group sessions, but also there are mass meetings for the benefit of the club as a whole.

MODEL PLANE B & I CLUB

The Model Plane Building and Identification Club offers opportunities to the student to make and learn to identify models of planes used by various nations, to gain a wider knowledge of aviation, and to receive training for posts in civilian defense. The club furnishes activities that appeal to members through personal interest. Some members joined to construct, some to learn to identify, and others to become more skillful in identification of models of planes. Moving pictures, slides which members have made, flash cards, and outside speakers familiar with the field help in attaining individual objectives. The club was most enlightened by two movies of the WEFT system of identification. Most of the members are excellent spotters, and keen competition is maintained by quizzes. Team rivalry in these quizzes has been great. The club stands ready to aid the government if there should be another call for models of planes.

MUSIC BOX

Although the Music Box was organized later than usual this year because of the unavoidable absence of its sponsor, Mr. Shenton, the club has tried to carry out a lively and helpful program for those interested. As usual, the club has proved an outlet not only for those who have ability and wish to show it, but also for those who wish to listen to and appreciate fine music. Following its former procedure, the club had games during its meetings, which, besides being fun, were planned to let every member show his own ability and put everyone on an equal competitive level, in this way helping some to have confidence in their own ability. Music appreciation by the use of records or of original works, has always been an important part of the club's activities, and this year the works of new and old composers have been listened to, discussed, and compared.

PAN-AMERICAN CLUB

The Pan-American Club, sponsored by Mr. Pullin, is an organization which is trying to develop a friendlier and closer understanding between the peoples of Latin America and those of the United States. At the meetings the members not only hear Spanish spoken, but they use their own knowledge of the language in conversations.

and talks, which, however, are not entirely in Spanish, since some of the members are only beginning the course. The meetings, which are held once every month, are both educational and entertaining. Meetings have consisted largely of plays in Spanish, and Spanish music, dancing, and games. The club has also had several speakers from Latin American countries who have given the members a better understanding of the people of their respective nations. It is also a yearly custom to spend a day in New York, visiting the Spanish theatre and other places offering Latin-American interest.

LYCEUM

The Lyceum Club, established to satisfy and stimulate interest in current affairs, has had an active year despite the fact that many students have focused their attention more directly on the war effort. Regular meetings have consisted of forum discussions on topics of current interest, led each time by some club member. Highlights of the year were a program of war movies sponsored by the club; the attendance of about fifteen members at an all day conference in January on Latin America at West Side High School, Newark, where one of our members conducted a discussion group; and in May, attendance at the annual conference at Montclair State Teachers College, where one of our members again led a discussion and another spoke on a broadcast of one of the discussions. The club also maintained two bulletin boards on current affairs, one in the library and another in room 340; and this year's club donated a two-year subscription of The Nation for the school library.

PERSONALITY CLUB

The Personality Club, sponsored by Mrs. Baker, helps the pupil to analyze herself for self-improvement. The club is divided into five main committees: the War Service Committee, the Psychology Committee, the Social Committee, the Program Committee, and the Publicity Committee. The activities of the club are planned by these five groups. Questionnaires are filled out by all members to determine what the individual is mainly interested in, and the groups are arranged accordingly. This year there have been nine meetings altogether. Only junior and senior girls are eligible for membership in this club. This year, the total number of members was 112, but next year the club will be limited to 100 girls. Consideration in the meetings is given to those qualities which best fit one for school life now and for future careers. The club is an active, interesting organization, formed to develop and enliven the personalities of its members.

RADIO CLUB

The members of the Radio Club are pupils who are greatly interested in radio and its contributions to our war effort. The sponsor and the officers of the club prepare varied programs for the group. Many former members of the Radio Club, or the Kilocycle Club, as it was known originally, are now doing a great job as radio operators for our armed forces or are serving in other capacities dealing with radio and aiding in our war effort. One of the responsibilities of the club is the maintenance and operation of the public address system through the school. Before the war broke out, the club also operated its own transmitter and receiver, but government regulations have put an end to amateur radio operation for the duration. However, the members of the club, with their receiver in the physics laboratory, occasionally listen to the commercial short wave stations.

SOPHOMORE DRAMATIC CLUB

This organization is one of the most traditional in Columbia High School. It is not only an all-sophomore club, but is one of the largest single groups in the school. Sincerity of interest in one or more of several dramatic fields is the basis for membership. Some of the different activities and groups of the club are: make-up, radio, drama appreciation, scenery painting, stage setting, theatre parties, radio broadcasts, assembly and regular club plays. Many of the school's most delightful assembly programs are presented by this organization which serves as a training ground and talent finder for dramatics in the junior and senior years. This year's presentations included three assembly plays, eight short meeting plays, either stage or radio, six theatre parties, four or five radio broadcasts, and some movies presented at group meetings. The members and sponsor hope to place 1943-44 among the banner years of the club's successful history.

VICTORY CORPS

The High School Victory Corps was suggested by the Office of Education in Washington, D. C., as a means through which the pupils in all the high schools of the land may identify themselves with the war effort. Each school is completely free to work out its own program, and here at Columbia the Victory Corps is administered by a Victory Corps Committee composed of the Director, the teacher sponsors of the five special divisions of the Victory Corps, and seven pupils. Sophomores can qualify for general membership only, but juniors and seniors may qualify for one of the five special service divisions, after they have first fulfilled the requirements for the general membership. The Victory Corps started here at Columbia with 343 charter members.

The Victory Corps is now in its second year. Throughout its existence it has served as a reservoir of help to all community and school wartime emergency projects. Members have aided substantially in two scrap drives in Maplewood and four in South Orange. The Community Service Division has supplied clerical help to various defense agencies in the two communities. The Corps has set up a central committee to co-ordinate all the wartime activities of the school.

The Corps participated in the U. S. Treasury Schools at War Treasure Drive, February 14 to 18, in which one hundred incomplete stamp books were uncovered to help swell the total sum raised in the Fourth War Bond Drive.

The Community Service Division sells War Savings Stamps regularly while the Sea Service Division sells bonds.

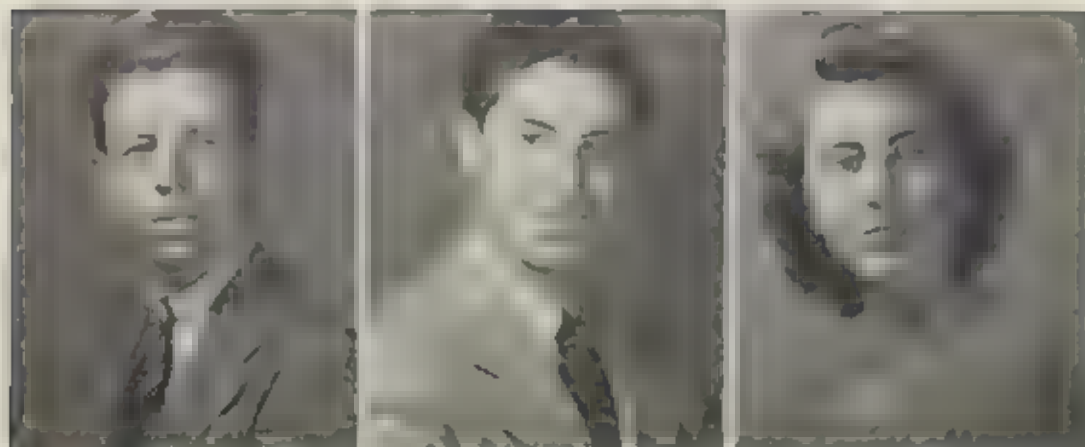

The Production Service Division is sponsoring a weekly course in agriculture for those boys and girls who plan to do patriotic work on farms this spring and summer.

FOOTBALL

Displaying a spirit and determination that overcame inexperience, Columbia's eleven finished its 1943 football season with a hard-fought scoreless tie with the traditional turkey-day rival, West Orange. Following an exciting triumph over East Orange, this game concluded a season of two victories, six defeats, and one tie.

After suffering their first defeat at the hands of Kearny in twenty years, by a score of 20-6, the Cougars came back at full strength to trip Plainfield, 12-0. Paced by the speed and deception of two good backs, Morristown's strong team blasted the home forces, 30-6. A week later, a last-minute pass for a tally brought a disillusioned crowd surging to its feet in the Orange tussle, but the unsuccessful extra point attempt gave the Cougars their third loss, 7-6. Following a 21-0 defeat at the hands of Westfield, Columbia came back to battle a Montclair team, on a muddy, rain-soaked gridiron, and lost only through two long Mountie scoring thrusts in the second period. New Brunswick crushed the Cougars, 24-0.

No individual star has emerged from the season, but many potentially good players seem to be lacking only experience and the improvement that comes with it. Only eight members of the squad will be lost by graduation.

A few sparkling plays will be remembered from the season of '43; the brilliantly executed quarterback sneak against Plainfield, the last minute pass against Orange, and the two scores against East Orange, but what will really live is the spirit of an out-classed, out-played eleven, which fought through a discouraging season and came up to a magnificent conclusion.

There is little to say, however, about wonderful plays, newspaper writeups, or colorful runs and passes. There can be no flaming adjectives injected in this article about crushing scores or brilliant blocking or excellent kicking. But there is a measure stick, one and one only, by which the team can be compared to former gridiron aggregations. That measurement is spirit, and it can be safely recorded that the 1943 eleven lived up to that standard throughout its rough schedule. That is a tribute which no one can discolor or dispute; that tribute, alone, should shine forth from the thirty-six players who were the team of '43!

Sports

G. A. A.

The Girls' Athletic Association, this year boasting a membership of 561, sponsors inter-class sports. Activities start in the fall with the inter-class tennis tournament. Soccer follows close on its heels amid bumps, bruises, and cold weather (this year rain, too). Basketball, volleyball, swimming, and baseball, offering keen competition, complete the year's program. As the months go by, the Dance Club more and more has become an important part of G.A.A.

Social activities started off with the Sophomore Party. The council with Joan Bottelli, president; Jane Kull, vice-president; Mary Carlaw, secretary; Cis Wilson, assistant secretary; Pat Allen, treasurer; and Lora Landers, assistant treasurer, gave a mock council meeting providing great amusement. The sophomore managers were duly initiated into the Council. Refreshments were served by the seniors.

Dear Jean -

Best wishes for a lovely summer!
It's been lots of fun knowing you and I'm looking forward to seeing you in the next two years.

Lots of love,

Gloria.
